HIST 398 Monuments, Commemoration, and Historical Memory (3 credits)

The aim of this course is to explore the contentious history of commemoration, monument construction, monument preservation, and monument destruction from the ancient world to the present. While our assigned reading will focus on the history of commemoration in the Western World and in the modern era, you are encouraged to conduct research on commemoration in any region and era that interests you.

usic 286: Music as Culture

"Music and Media"

Drew Borecky

This course explores how sound and music interact with various forms of visual media. Starting with the Hollywood musical, this course examines the role of music and sound via different perspectives and technologies including cinema, television, and video game studies. We will analyze global media, including Bollywood film, Japanese videogames, and American television among other forms of media. No prior musical experience required.
